
OLD FIRM GAME

Posted by admin - 2008/03/31 01:16

Well, we got beat again by a Rangers 11 that are no great football team. Smith does not change his tactics for anyone, we knew the team and formation, so why did we not counter is.

My opinion Naka should not have been on.. I refuse to jump on any media driven band wagons but on this occassion he was missing once again..but one player is not a team. We simply did not push them enough.

The goal was gifted as we had 3 players diving in not watching the runner..basic stuff :(

Re:OLD FIRM GAME

Posted by Tojo - 2008/03/31 10:18

I agree but the whole game was so predictable and tactically Strachan got it totally wrong again.4 men at the back to cover 1 man and once again Naylor gets caught inside him ball watching for the goal not for the 1st time this season.Neither keeper had a decent save to make in the 90 mins and I dont see us improving or doing anything spectacular in the 2 games at parkhead.maybe time for WGS to admit he's not got it ride off into the sunset

Re:OLD FIRM GAME

Posted by admin - 2008/04/01 05:14

My hope for summer now is we sign a more experienced players and amongst this an experienced midfield player to assist Scott Brown..he needed a Neil Lennon type around him to control him and allow him to go forward more. I feel Brown is becoming a scape goat at the tender age of 21 ??

We all see the defence problems and has been there all season if WGS does not see it, then afraid he is not the man for us..we should respect his trophy haul and say cheerio.
